Les plantes sont partout

Original Publisher: Pratham Books

Author: Ritu Desai

Illustrator: Ekta Bharti

Translator: Cyrille Largillier

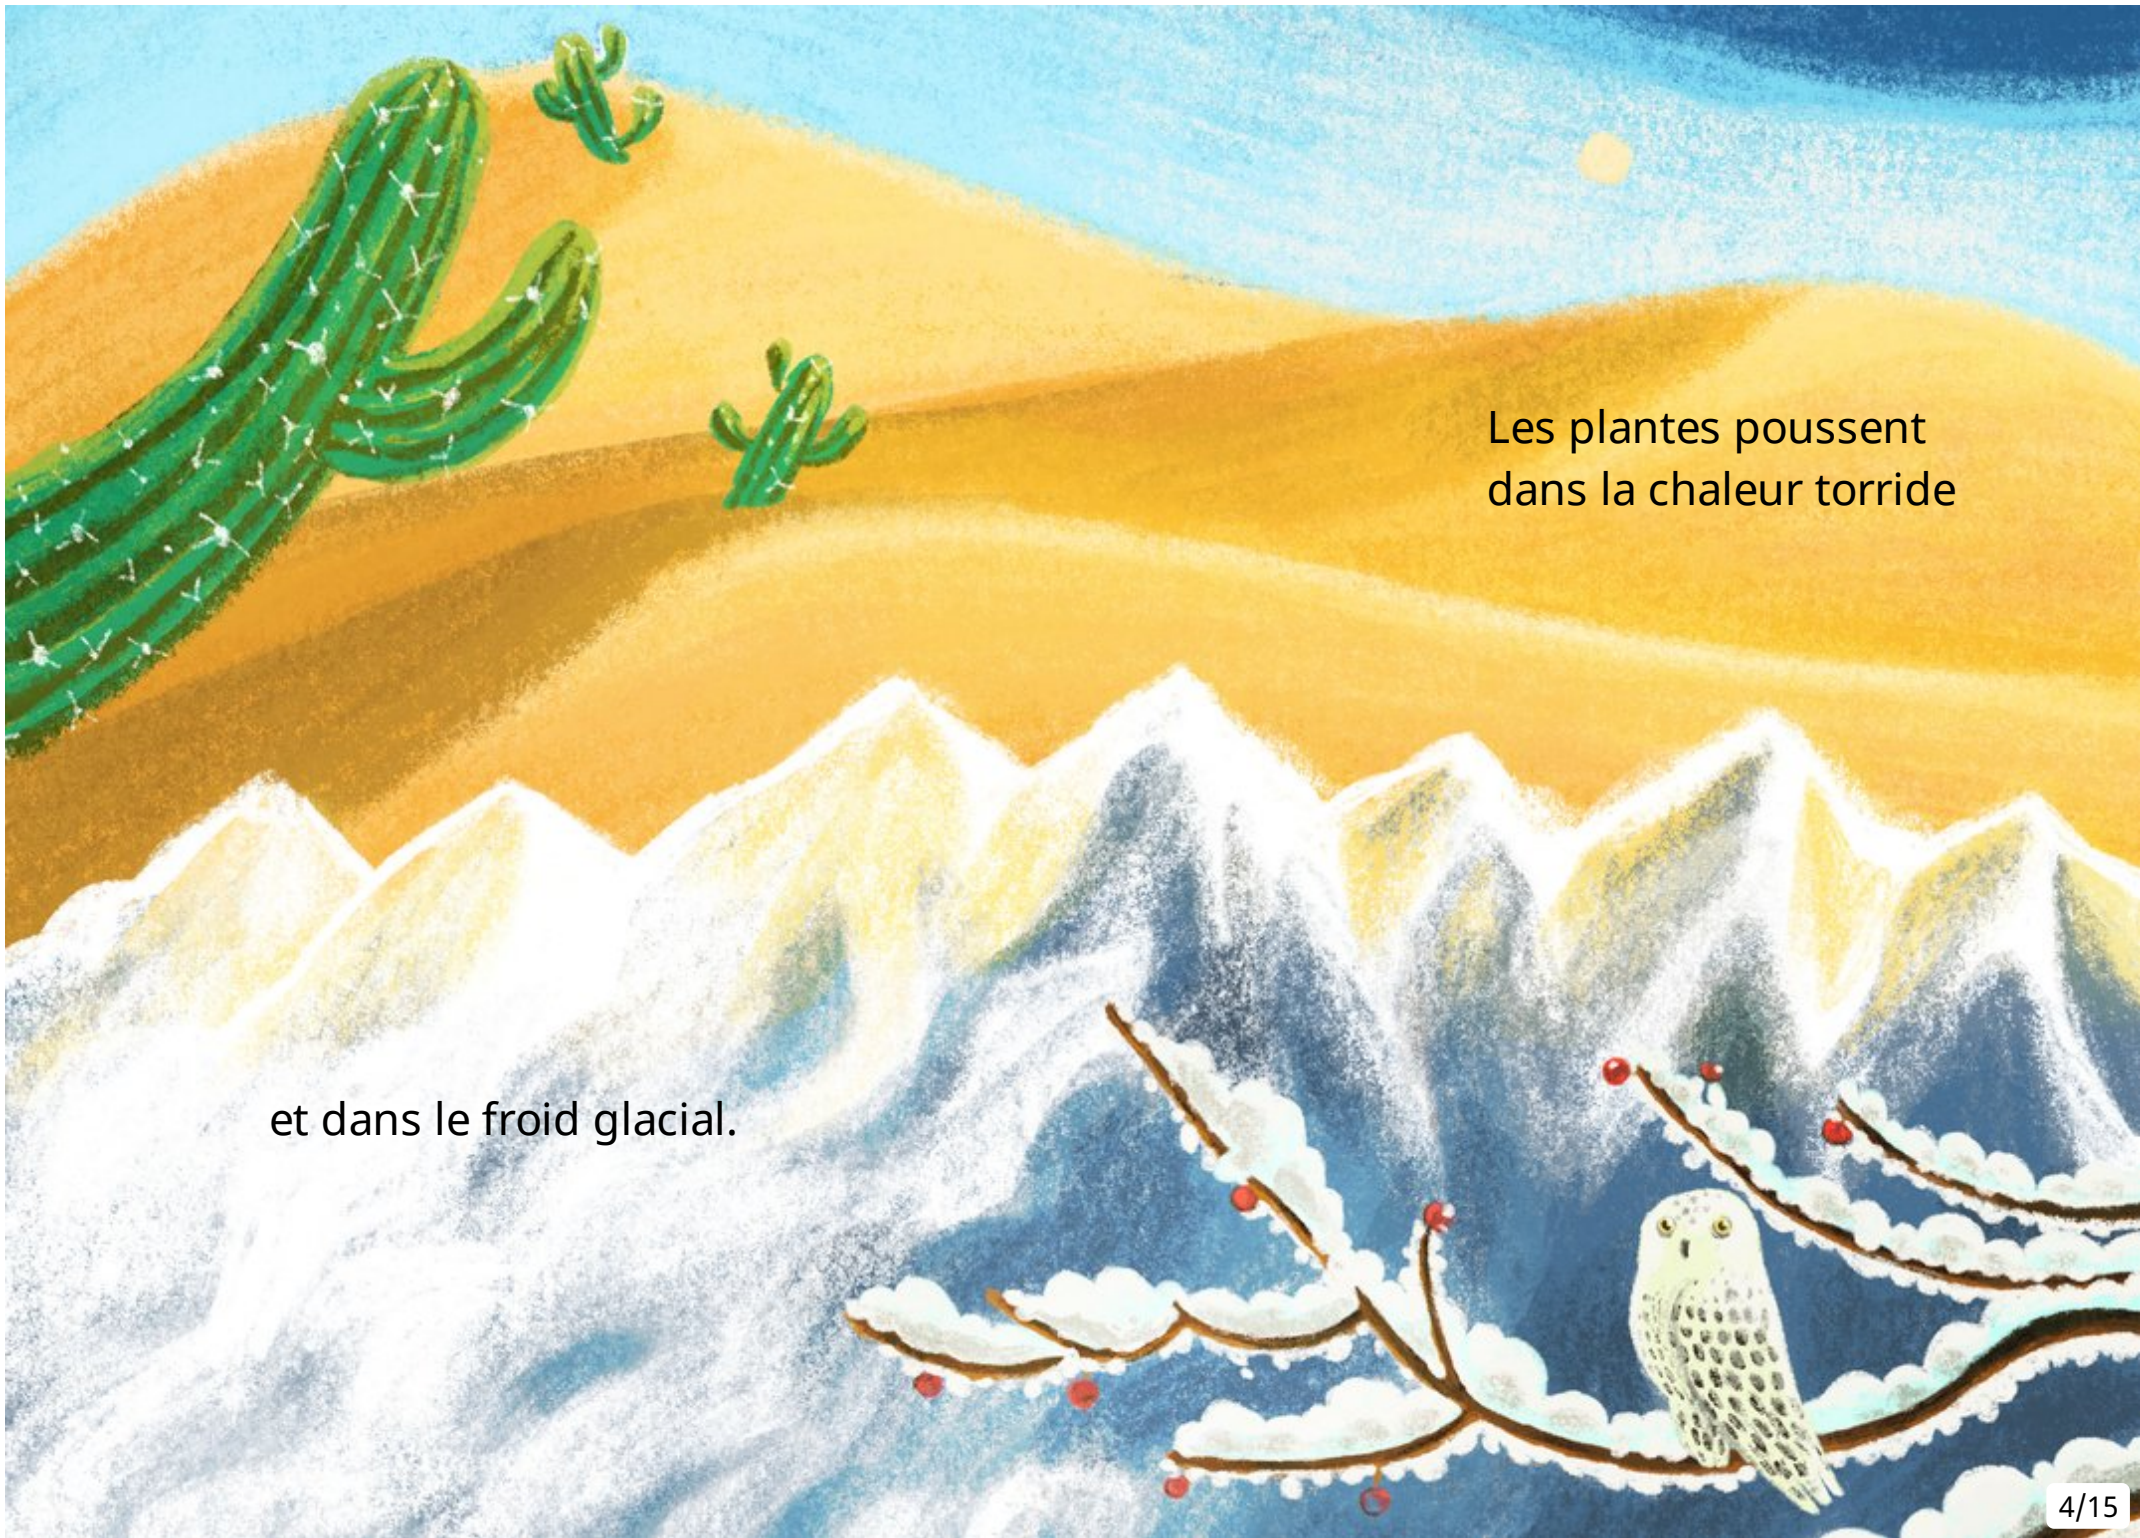

Les plantes poussent partout :
sur es hautes montagnes,

sur les terres arides,

et même sous la mer.

Les plantes poussent
dans la chaleur torride

et dans le froid glacial.

Les plantes
grimpent.

Les concombres et les vignes s'appuient
et grimpent sur les poteaux et les branches.

Les plantes rampent.

Les citrouilles et les melons rampent sur
le sol.

Les plantes poussent sur l'eau.

Les nénuphars et les lotus flottent à la surface des lacs et des étangs.

Les plantes poussent sous l'eau.

Les prairies marines ondulantes sont enracinées au fond de la mer.

Les plantes fleurissent même durant les hivers les plus rigoureux.

Les choux et les choux-fleurs poussent cachés sous une sous une couche de neige.

Les plantes poussent pendant les étés les plus chauds.

Les cactus fleurissent dans les déserts sablonneux, avec leurs racines peu profondes poussant sous la surface.

Les plantes poussent sur les rochers et les pierres.

La mousse glissante s'étend comme une couverture verte veloutée sur les rochers des rivières et les grottes humides.

Les plantes
poussent sous le sol.

Les pommes de terre et les carottes
poussent sous le sol, avec seulement leurs feuilles qui dépassent de la terre.

Les plantes sortent du sol et deviennent de plus en plus grandes. Elles s'étirent et se déploient vers le soleil, comme nous tous.
